

Abstract

The present invention represents non-structured features that are common with word-processors such that these elements can be recognized and parsed separately from other elements within an XML document. Empty tags are used to mark the start 5 and end of a feature that may span other features.